Mr. Cummings explained to the court, however, that it was not his contention that a blow struck with some instrument caused the fracture of the skuil, but that a blow caused him to fall and receive the wound by contact with the cement landing.

Before Chief of Police Brennan ended his testimony all of Ballou's clothing, with the exception of his shoes, covered with many ugly stains, were held up and identified by Brennan. Mrs. Angle faced these exhibits without emotion.

The several stories told by Mrs. Angle after Ballou's death were gone over by Detective Sergeaut Heffernan, who followed his chief on the stand. According to the first story, he said, Mrs. Angle to the first story, he said, Mrs. Angle told him that after Ballou left her she some of the Latest Names Placed went to call on another tenant in the building. She returned the back way and had been in her apartment only a few minutes when Ballou tapped on the door and said he had fallen or dropped something and wanted to tell her so she would not be frightened. Then he went away.

Heffernan said Mrs. Angle told him that she went down stairs and on the way back found Ballou's hat on the landing. This was arranged yesterday at a conference held in the rooms of the commission at the City Hall between the associates of the commission and Park Commissioner Cabot Ward. When Mr. Ward took office he observed at once that many of the statues in the city parks and in public squares were in a sad state. They were grimy. Fissures had gone unrepaired. The new Commissioner consulted therefore with several art organizations as to the best way to remedy conditions which re-flected no credit upon the city. It was finally decided that the matter of renovating and repairing should be placed in the hands of the Municipal Art Com-At the conference vesterday commit-

Were "Just and Reasonable." Public Utility Commissioners announced Public Utility Commissioners announced to-night its refusal to sanction the proposed increase of passenger rates by railroads operating in New Jersey. The refusal was accompanied by a brief statement setting forth that the railroads had failed to establish that the proposed increases were just and reasonable. The design applies only to register able. The decision applies only to points within the State of New Jersey and afwithin the State of New Jersey and affects principally the Pennsylvania and Philadelphia and Reading systems, including the West Jersey and Seashore and Atlantic City railroads in the southern section of the State. The increases were attacked by commuters and civic organizations of south Jersey and by communities which it was alleged would be seriously injured by the new schedules.

The $6,000 was paid to Butler, it was developed yesterday, in two instalments and none of it handed over until Thaw was out of New York State. He gave Butler, he testified yesterday, $5,000 after they had crossed the border into Connecticut and $1,000 after he. Thaw, had been returned to New York in the mittee because of a previous engage-when State's Attorney Cummings brought the proceedings to a halt with a inction to amend the indictment. Jacob Klein, Mrs. Angle's attorney, objected and held the court's attention nearly an hour, arguing against the amendment. The entire morning session was given up to the consideration of this point, and Judge Williams finally ruled that the change might be made.

The original indictment read that Mrs. Angle by striking Ballou with her fists caused him to fall down stairs so that he received the fatal fracture of the skull. To this in the revised indictment was added the allegation that she did strike him with "certain instruments," which will broaden the scope of the State's Attorney in his argument to show how Ballou might have died. Later she changed her story, said the cergeant, to the effect that she heard a noise and went down and found Ballou lying on the landing. "I have hurt my head," she said Ballou told her, and she helped him to his feet and went down stairs with him, his head resting on her shoulder.
